Pilots Defy Storms, Supply Soldiers

EASTERN FRONT, Korea, (UP) American helicopter pilots today defied raging snowstorms to fly emergency supplies to the Eastern Korean troops from where 103 South Korean soldiers were dead or missing in the heaviest storm in 40 years.

An estimated 29,000 Republic of Korea troops and a small detachment of Americans were isolated near the steep ridges of four days of continuing blizzards.

ROK Army headquarters reported 78 soldiers had perished of snow and cold and 25 are missing. Another 51 soldiers were injured in accidents caused by the storms.

Officials feared the casualty toll would mount as Army crews struggled in the continuing storm to restore communications with the scattered units in the mountainous area.

Most of the dead were reported to have suffocated in bunkers, pillboxes and front-line shacks which were buried under a foot of snow. The record snowfall ranged from seven to 10 feet deep in the worst-hit areas.

Best Remedy for Retirement Blues Is Going Out and Get Yourself a Job You Like

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (UP) — There are people who do want to do it in this world — whatever there's to be done — and there are those who don't care.

John R. Crooks always did what was to be done. He always smiled, but he also held behind his smile the fierce pride all true craftsmen have in a job they love. Last summer, after 52 years in the same old salt mine, Johnny Crooks was put out to pasture on a well-earned pension. But, like many another retired man, he became desperately unhappy. He cured himself by going out and taking a job in a new field.

"The best remedy for retirement blues" might be interested in Johnny's story. Here it is: In 1903 Johnny, a bandy-legged boy of 14, solemn in the dignity of knee britches and bowler hat,

Also teachers are asked to prepare questions on retirement which they would like to have answered, and to bring the pamphlets to the meeting.

Campaign Gift Probe Nears End

WASHINGTON (UP) — A Senate committee's investigation of an attempt to make a $2,500 campaign contribution to Sen. Francis Case (R-SD) neared an end today.

Meanwhile, Republican and Democratic members of another committee sought to resolve a dispute over plans for a much broader inquiry into lobbying and campaign contributions.

Elmer Patman of Austin, Tex., was called for the third time before a special committee investigating whether an improper attempt was made to influence Case's vote on the natural gas bill.

Patman is a $35,000-a-year lawyer for the Superior Oil Co. of California. His appearance was expected to wind up the public hearing of the committee, headed by Sen. George (D-Ga.).

The 25 $100 bills spurned by Case were left with one of his friends in South Dakota by John M. Neff, a Lexington, Neb., lobbyist for Superior Oil, after Neff had made inquiries about the senator's position on the bill to free natural gas companies from direct federal regulation.

4-County Group Talks to Faubus About Millwood

Delegations from four southwest Arkansas counties yesterday called on Governor Orval Faubus at the state capitol and presented a comprehensive report on proposed Millwood dam.

The conference lasted an hour and 15 minutes. The report was presented by Attorney Charles Conway of Texarkana, president of the Southwest Arkansas Water District. Main purpose of the conference was to present factual information to the governor and to acquaint him with the present status of the proposed dam.

The governor was not requested to make an official statement, pending a report and study of plans from the Corp of U. S. Engineers which he will receive later. The Southwest Arkansas delegation was well received and pleased with the conference.

Attending from Texarkana were Attorney Charles Conway, who acted as spokesman, and Charles Kuhn also of Texarkana, member of the Arkansas Industrial Commission from Miller county.

From Hope: Mayor H. M. Olsen, County Judge U. G. Garrett, Chamber of Commerce Manager B. N. Holt, Vincent W. Foster, C. V. Nunn, Jr., John L. Wilson, Ray Turner, Harrell C. Hall and Leonard Ellis.

From Prescott: County Judge Mitchell and Harold Hendrix.

From Magnolia: Three representatives who arrived after the conference got underway and whose names were not learned. Magnolia is vitally interested in a "wet" Millwood dam after disclosures of a falling water table in Columbia county.

After the conference with the governor, several members of the delegation called on William P. Rock, executive secretary of the Arkansas Industrial Commission, and presented him factual information on the proposed dam. This conference lasted two hours.

Mr. Rock has recently been widely quoted as saying that one of the important keys to industrial development is an abundant water supply.

British Army Officer Ousted From Jordan

AMMAN, Jordan (UP) — Lt. Gen. John Bagot Glubb, dismissed as army commander, was escorted out of Jordan today under guard of 16 tanks. His ouster by King Hussein was a new blow to British prestige in the Middle East.

The British government, which set up Jordan's Arab Legion and has been subsidizing it, said it had assured friendly relations would continue. But the Foreign Office in London said the "abrupt dismissal of this distinguished officer" brought deep concern to London officials.

Glubb, leader of the Arab Legion in the war against Israel in 1948, was dismissed as chief of the army general staff. Britain pays Jordan $22,400,000 annually for support of the 20,000-man Arab Legion. This is more than half the budget of the Arab kingdom.

In January Syria, Egypt and Saudi Arabia offered Jordan an annual grant to replace the British subsidy. The declared aim of the offer was to strengthen Jordan against "any Israeli aggression," but Wethermers expressed belief a more primary purpose was to strengthen Jordan's rejection of bids to join the Baghdad defense alliance.

King Hussein and Premier Samir el Rifai carried out the ouster of Glubb and other British officers to satisfy strong anti-Western elements demanding that the Arab Legion come completely under Arab control.

Texarkana Banker Hurt in Wreck

LEWISVILLE, (UP) — W. T. Murphy Jr., 50, southwestern Arkansas investment banker and member of the board of directors of Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co., was seriously injured in a wreck five miles west of here last night.

Murphy suffered two broken legs and cuts and bruises. He was a passenger in a car driven by his son, Bill, 24, who was badly shaken up in the accident. The Murphys' car collided with a car driven by J. D. Burns of Magnolia, in a heavy rainstorm. Burns escaped with slight injuries. The Murphys were returning to Texarkana from their plantation near Bradley, Ark.

State Trooper Tom Smalley investigated the accident. No charges have been filed in the case.

High Court Next Step in Muddled Dog Racing Deal

LITTLE ROCK (UP) — The muddled minute controversy over whether there'll be dog racing at West Memphis went before the Arkansas Supreme Court today with a new twist.

Atty. Gen. Tom Gentry asked the court to set aside a temporary restraining order issued by Pulaski Chancery Court which forbids the Arkansas Racing Commission to license Southland Racing Corporation's new track.

The Supreme Court took the attorney general's petition under advisement after a 55-minute hearing before all seven justices.

The purpose of Gentry's move wasn't clear since he is official counsel for the racing commission, which is trying to avoid granting a permit to Southland.

Gentry reiterated at today's hearing that he would appeal a conflicting order from another court which would require the commission to issue the permit. Associate Justice Ed McFaddin asked Gentry if he intended to appeal.

"Most assuredly," Gentry replied. McFaddin then asked if the appeal would be filed today.

"That is a matter that is not before the court at this time, your honor. The time hasn't expired," The Racing Commission ignited the legal catch-as-catch-can wrangle by rejecting Southland's original application for a franchise on the ground that dog racing isn't in "the best interests of the state."

In fact the commission ignited the legal catch-as-catch-can wrangle by rejecting Southland's original application for a franchise on the ground that dog racing isn't in "the best interests of the state."

If the Supreme Court grants Gentry's motion for dismissal of the Pulaski Chancery order, the commission will be obliged to issue a permit to Southland under an order by Crittenden Chancery Court.

Crittenden Chancellor W. Leon Smith, ruling that the commission overstepped its authority in rejecting Southland's application, has directed that a franchise be granted to the new million dollar track no later than midnight tonight.

Dr. Edwin Dunaway, chairman of the commission, has said the group will abide by Chancellor of the commission, has said the group will abide by Chancellor Smith's order regardless of the status of Pulaski Chancellor Sam Rorex's injunction. He pointed out that Smith and Rorex have equal authority, and noted that Smith made his decision first.

Arabia Wants to Buy U. S. Jet Planes

WASHINGTON (UP) — Saudi Arabia was disclosed today to have asked to buy a small number of jet planes from the United States in addition to 18 more tanks.

Officials who reported this said the request has not received U.S. approval. They indicated it would get the same "most careful scrutiny" promised for all Middle East arms requests in a Feb. 18 State Department announcement lifting a two-day embargo on such shipments.

The embargo was imposed amid controversy over a previous shipment of light tanks.

The Saudi request for an undisclosed number of jet planes and 18 M47 Patton medium tanks, officials said, is in addition to seven million dollars worth of U.S. military goods authorized for shipment to Saudi Arabia in the past six months.

This represents almost half the 16 millions in arms shipments to the Middle East for which export licenses were granted since August. Of the rest, six million went to other Arab countries and three million to Israel, it was understood.

Israel's big request for 63 millions in defensive weapons is still "under consideration." The figure was revised upward from 50 millions as a result of changes made in the arms list first submitted Nov. 16 by Israeli Ambassador Abba Eban.

Cancer, Heart Disease Funds Get Approval

WASHINGTON (UP) — The House Appropriations Committee today voted a big boost in funds to fight cancer, heart trouble and other diseases as it recommended $8,301,508,041 in new money to finance 24 government agencies.

The money is for use during the fiscal year starting July 1 and is $154,155,641 more than President Eisenhower had requested.

However, the increase was more than accounted for by the committee's decision to add $20 million dollars more than Eisenhower had requested for the Civil Service retirement fund.

The committee said to extra money would help keep the fund on a sound actuarial basis, it noted that the fund technically has a deficit of $13,400,000 because the government hasn't been regularly paying its share to supplement the six per cent contributions of federal employees.

One of the sharpest cuts, $7,100,000 below the President's request, was made in funds for the Civil Defense Administration, to which the committee voted $25,100,000.

For operation of the National Health Institutes, which conduct research in medicine, the committee voted $135,525,000. This is a million more than Eisenhower requested, and 37 million more than the NIH received this year.

The National Cancer Institute was allotted $34,437,000, a boost of 2 million over the President's proposal; the Mental Health Institute $23,749,000, up 2 million; the Heart Institute $25,100,000, a 3-million hike; the dental program $3,411,000, a boost of $50,000; the arthritis and metabolic diseases program $13,845,000, an increase of $500,000; and the neurology and blindness program $4,198,000, a hike of 2 million.

For microbiology activities the committee voted $9,799,000, a cut of a million.

More than half of the total was voted for the Veterans' Administration. The Konrad Heller, a German agent, knows of Mike's visits to Stergiou, but thus far Morrison is not suspected of helping the British.

Chapter III

Mike stood at Petraki, 17. The street was black and empty. He swayed up the steps and reached for the big brass knocker. It hit the plate and the door jarred open.

He leaned against the door frame, bracing himself and waiting for Tassos to come.

"Only got one good ear between them anyhow."

Mike shoved the door and plunged into a pitch-black hallway. He fumbled through his pockets, found his matches and lit one and squatted around. The match burned his fingers. He dropped it and yelled. He lit another and found the hall switch.

"Stergiou! Wake up! His echo bounced through the place weirdly. He staggered farther into the hall and called again. The house was eerie and his head reeled from wine.

"Stergiou, come out, come out, wherever you are!"

He stood before the door to the old man's office. "Probably asleep at his desk."

Mike leaned against the door and pitched into the office. The door groaned shut behind him. His hands groped for the desk lamp.

The lamp light broke the room into dim yellow and black shadows. His eyes peered into the shadows and he scanned the room. It was a shambles!

There on the floor—Stergiou's glasses—smashed, and the carpet reed with blood around them.

"Morrison," a voice whispered from the shadow.

The blood rushed from Mike's lips as a jolt of fear hit him. His throat muscles tightened into dryness.

Mike's jaw trembled open. "Who are you?" he croaked unevenly.

"Over-by the door," the voice said.

"Who are you? Where is Stergiou?"

"Stergiou's dead."

His head turned slowly and he strained his eyes. Yes, there was someone there. Through the dull yellow shadow he could see a man's face staring at him.

"Oh—no—no—no. Leave me alone—leave me alone. I'm—I'm getting out of here."

He lurched toward the door in blind fear.

"Morrison! Stand still! I have a gun on you!"

The command halted him. Mike's eyes bulged in terror. His face was wet with sweat. He looked at the man. The man sat in a chair. There were streaks of blood running from the corners of the man's mouth and the man's big walrus mustache was red with blood.

"What do you want of me?" Mike pleaded.

"The envelope—the envelope—you must deliver it. A plane—leaves Tatoi airdrome—midnight—take my credentials."

Mike's hands fumbled through his pockets. He found the envelope. "Take it. I'm an American citizen—you've no right to mix me up in this."

The man groaned and his eyes rolled and on his face appeared the stamp of death. His whisper fluttered. "You have no choice, Morrison. They'll get you. They are on to you. Don't—don't try the American Embassy."

They'll have it surrounded. They—they have friends—everywhere. You—have no choice, Morrison."

The hand holding the pistol dropped limply and the pistol clattered to the floor. Mike grabbed the man's lapel.

"Who are they?" he said. "Who are they?"

The man's head rolled back. His lips trembled open but he was unable to speak. Mike bent down and picked up the pistol and put the credential card in his pocket.

The Avenue Vasilissis Sofias was devoid of life. The wide boulevard had not a car—not a sign of a human on it. The houses were dark—no light shone except for a dim street lamp.

Let me wake up! Let me wake up! he cried to himself. He continued running down the deserted thoroughfare—two blocks—three—four—until everything blurred.

There—Down the street—a light. He peered through the window. The saloon was empty except for the barkeep.

Mike buckled over the bar, panting for breath. The bartender stared at him wide-eyed. "English," Mike gasped. "You speak English?"

The bartender began rambling in Greek.

Mike fished through his pocket and slapped a bill on the counter. He stumbled back of the bar to the phone. The bartender glanced at the money and kept his confusioned vigil.

"Operator—operator—hello. Can you understand me? English?"

No—no—American Embassy. That's right, that's right—hurry—please. My eyes and whistled under his breath as he heard a ring—then two, three, four. "Answer! Answer!"

He said the phone back on the hook and leaned against the back of the bar trying to think through the fog. A sob broke through his lips and tears rolled from his eyes.

Robertson's Career Gets Big Boost

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, March 1 (AP)—Dale Robertson, newly embarked on a free lance acting career, could write a book titled "Mistakes I Have Made."

The drawing actor is getting his career off the ground after a sensational beginning and then a dull period. Despite a generous fulfill his promise. Now he can look back on the experience and profit from what went wrong.

He admits that he was to frank and too trusting.

"I got some of the press mad at me," he remarked. "In October two years ago, I counted up 183 layouts that had been done on me that year. That was entirely too much. Even if you're very fond of chicken, you're going to get tired of it if I feed it to you every day."

"So I said I wasn't going to do any more publicity for the last two months of that year. But people didn't like that. The press started potshotting at me, and some of them haven't let up since."

His big mistake, he concluded, was allowing those 183 layouts to be made in the first place.

Concerning his acting career, he said that he erred in signing with 20th Century-Fox.

"I had a good role in 'Fighting Man of the Plains,'" he explained. "The studios started counting me, and my agents urged me to sign with Fox. I thought it would be better to play the independent field; I had offers for four pictures. But my agents argued that I needed a big studio behind me."

"So I signed. And I never did get a role as good as the one I had in 'Fighting Man of the Plains.'"

The Oklahoma man did some films on the lot, then became the loan-out king. He figures the studio made around $800,000 profit on his services to other producers.

The low point was his loan to Howard Hughes for the gaudy, fused vigil.

AROUND THE WORLD
RIDGEWELL, England (UP)—Remember the gremlins who plagued the U.S. and the Royal Air Forces during the war? The little imps who sawed through struts and punched holes in fuel tanks.

One of the original gremlins was en route today to Los Angeles and the bedside of ex-Corporal Hall Rogers, the man who first pictured their pointed ears and sloping shoulders.

Rogers' wife wrote that the former airman was paralyzed with polio and wished for one of his original gremlins to cheer him. The gremlins were sketched on the walls of the airbases by Rogers during his stay in England in the 1940s.

The cheerful corporal was well known to the gremlins and for the parties he gave for the war-weary children of North Exes. And the RAF came through.

The Britons sent the elf on his way and with him was a gift of polished inlaid wooden cigar box

ITTLE ROCK (AP)—A mass meeting of persons opposed to gambling has been scheduled here Monday, Dr. Ben L. Bridges, executive secretary of the Arkansas Baptist State Convention, said today.

Dr. Bridges said the meeting, to be held at the Winfield Methodist Church, was a result of "agitation about the proposed dog race track at West Memphis."

He charged that "gambling interests are trying to make Arkansas an oasis for gamblers and a Mecca for gambling interests."

DOROTHY DIX

You Can Overdo Hard-to-Get Act

Dear Miss Dix: Six years ago I met Don, a young man who was only 17 and enjoyed playing hard-to-get, which was, I guess, the reason I lost him.

After he began dating another girl, I realized I loved him. He married the girl, and they moved to a large city. Some time later I was visiting my brother in that city. Don heard I was there and came to see me. He related a story of marital unhappiness and misunderstandings. He told me of their plans for divorce; in other words, he just told me all his troubles.

I know now that sooner or later we'll meet again and he'll ask to renew our friendship. In the years that have elapsed I've met many attractive men, but none I liked as much as I do Don. What should I do when we meet, treat him as a good old friend or ignore him?

MOIRA

Answer: My goodness, didn't you run into enough trouble with this "ignoring" route? That's how you lost Don, and I'll wager many another suitor has gone the same way. When a young man with troubles seeks out an old friend expecting to find a sympathetic listener, he doesn't want to be ignored.

Proceed Carefully

Moreover, for the time I suggest that you let Don handle his personal affairs without your assistance. You aren't exactly a disinterested party, you know. He has a serious matrimonial snag to unravel and until he comes to a solution, your place is almost definitely in the background. Don't ignore him to the offensive stage, and don't overdo the "old friend" act. Since any resemblance between your feelings for Don and those of an old friend are purely coincidental, you must maintain a strictly middle-of-the-road course. If he and his wife reconcile, step out of the picture entirely. If they persist in divorce, he'll undoubtedly need a very sympathetic listener.

Dear Miss Dix: A girl friend of ours told us she is planning a secret marriage to a boy of 20 who lives in a distant city and whom she hasn't seen for two years. Since she is only 16, we are concerned over whether or not she should do this foolish thing. He sent her the money to come to him, but her parents think she's visiting a girl friend for the week. How can we stop this?

THREE FRIENDS

Answer: There's a time and place for everything — including interference in another's affairs. This foolish affair should be stopped even if it means telling the girl's parents. Try to make your friend see the light first; if your efforts are fruitless, tell her folks.

Dear Miss Dix: There are about 15 girls in our office. We have one complainer, a girl who has had every disease on earth and many more that exist only in her imagination. We've been regaled with stories about her backache, headache, teeth pulling, eye trouble, foot bone trouble, rash, the things she can't eat and numerous others. In a word, she's a bore. How can we stop her?

Answer: The best way to stop monologues is with a monologue of your own. Try this plan. Next Monday, each of you come in with a carefully prepared and rehearsed talk on some ailment you have just discovered. If necessary, borrow a medical journal for details. Every time your little hypochondriac starts in on her ills, one of you girls bring attention to your own ailment. Make them interesting and you'll enjoy them so much you'll probably acquire more. At least it's almost guaranteed that your complainer will be silenced.

an organization man. He didn't get to travel much himself—there was a family to be raised—but he traveled and suffered in spirit with scores of foreign correspondents.

His closest buddy was the late Jim Mills, dean of war reporters in his time, whom Gandhi once said he expected would be waiting to interview him at the gates of Heaven. They both have reached the gates, since then, but Jim hasn't found a way to get the story through.

When Johnny Crooks, this skinny reservoir of news history, went to pasture last summer there was a big gap left in the office where he had worked for so long. It was a spiritual thing.

Johnny wasn't happy either. He cherished the inscribed gold watch—it was what he wanted and other farcical souvenir gifts for more than half a century of service. He had the pension. He also was free now every day to watch the morning workouts a race-tracks where, as a boy, he had dreamed of riding.

But he missed the daily bugle of duty, the active feeling of belonging. After nine endless, restless weeks, Johnny heard of a part-time stenographic job in a Wall Street law firm, applied for it and got it.

He found age no handicap in adjusting to a new job. He is boyant again, happy in new loyalties. The name of the firm that gave him this break was a name if I mention it please. I mean a partner—Flood, Cawley, Walsh, Stahl—and Johnny Crooks, Johnny, chirpy as a chick now, says idleness is a curse to a long time working man. He advocates a new start.

"It's a mistake for an employer to look at a man's gray hair and refuse him a job," he said. "Gray matter goes with gray hair—and it's always worth hiring."

"It is work that keeps a man young. It is wonderful to learn new things. I've made a lot of new friends. I'm happier now than I've been in many a year."

Johnny, who has more bounce to the ounce at 66 than many a man half his age, gives this as his personal recipe for keeping pep:

"Don't dissipate. Don't overeat. Do everything in moderation. And attend church regularly."

THE STORY: Mike Morrison, an American, is Athens on business when the German Army invades Greece in 1941. His lawyer, Stergiou, asks him to deliver a letter to London. Morrison thinks it is a business communication, but it is a message to British intelligence.

Konrad Heisser, a German agent, knows of Mike's visits to Stergiou, but thus far Morrison is not suspected of helping the British.

Chapter III

Mike stood at Petraki, 17. The street was black and empty. He swayed up the steps and reached for the big brass knocker. It hit the plate and the door jarred open.

He leaned against the door frame, bracing himself and waiting for Tassos to come.

"Only got one good ear between them anyhow."

Mike shoved the door and plunged into a pitch-black hallway. He fumbled through his pockets, found his matches and lit one and squinted around. The match burned his fingers. He dropped it and yelled. He lit another and found the hall switch.

"Stergiou! Wake up! His echo bounced through the place weirdly. He staggered farther into the hall and called again. The house was eerie and his head reeled from wine.

"Stergiou, come out, come out, wherever you are!"

He stood before the door to the old man's office. "Probably asleep at his desk."

Mike leaned against the door and pitched into the office. The door groaned shut behind him. His hands groped for the desk lamp.

The lamp lit broke the room into dim yellow and black shadows. His eyes peered into the shadows and he scanned the room. It was a shambles!

There—on the floor—Stergiou's glasses—smashed, and the carpet red with blood around them.

"Morrison," a voice whispered from the shadow.

The blood rushed from Mike's lips as a jolt of fear hit him. His throat muscles tightened into dryness.

Mike's jaw trembled open. "Who are you" he croaked unevenly.

"Over—by the door," the voice said.

"Who are you? Where is Stergiou?"

"Stergiou's dead."

His head turned slowly and he strained his eyes. Yes, there was someone there. Through the dull yellow shadow he could see a man's face staring at him.

"Oh—no—no—no. Leave me alone—leave me alone. I'm—I'm getting out of here."

He lurched toward the door in blind fear.

"Morrison! Stand still! I have a gun on you!"

The command halted him. Mike's eyes bulged in terror. His face was wet with sweat. He looked at the man. The man sat in a chair. There were streaks of blood running from the corners of the man's mouth and the man's big walrus mustache was red with blood.

"What do you want of me?" Mike pleaded.

"The envelope—the envelope—you must deliver it. A plane—leaves Tatol airdrome—midnight—take my credentials."

Mike's hands fumbled through his pockets. He found the envelope.

"Take it. I'm an American citizen—you've no right to mix me up in this."

In this, the man groaned and his eyes rolled and on his face appeared the stamp of death. His whisper fluttered. "You have no choice, Morrison. They'll get you. They are on to you. Don't—don't try the American Embassy."

They'll have it surrounded. They—they have friends—everywhere. You—have no choice, Morrison."

The hand holding the pistol dropped limply and the pistol clattered to the floor. Mike grabbed the man's lapel.

"Who are they?" he said. "Who are they?"

The man's head rolled back. His lips trembled open but he was unable to speak. Mike bent down and picked up the pistol and put the credential card in his pocket.

The Avenue Vasilissis Sofias was devoid of life. The wide boulevard had not a car—not a sign of a human on it. The houses were dark—no light shone except for a dim street lamp.

Let me wake up! Let me wake up! he cried to himself. He continued running down the deserted thoroughfare—two blocks—three—four—until everything blurred.

There. Down the street—a light. He peered through the window. The saloon was empty except for the barkeep.

Mike buckled over the bar, panting for breath. The bartender stared at him wide-eyed. "English," Mike gasped. "You speak English?"

The bartender began rambling in Greek.

Mike fished through his pocket and slapped a bill on the counter. He stumbled back of the bar to the phone. The bartender glanced at the money and kept his confusioned vigil.

"Operator—operator—hello. Can you understand me? Englezois. American Embassy."

No—no—American Embassy. That's right, that's right—hurry—please."

Mike closed his eyes and whispered under his breath as he heard a ring—then two, three, four. "Answer! Answer!"

He slid the phone back on the hook and leaned against the back of the bar trying to think through the fog. A sob broke through his lips and tears rolled from his eyes.

Robertson's Career Gets Big Boost

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, March 1 (AP)—Dale Robertson, newly embarked on a free lance acting career, could write a book titled "Mistakes I Have Made."

The drawing actor is getting his career off the ground after a sensational beginning and then a dull period. Despite a generous fan following, Robertson failed to fulfill his promise. Now he can look back on the experience and profit from what went wrong.

He admits that he was to frank and too trusting.

"I got some of the press mad at me," he remarked. "In October two years ago, I counted up 183 layouts that had been done on me that year. That was entirely too much. Even if you're very fond of chicken, you're going to get tired of it if I feed it to you every day."

"So I said I wasn't going to do any more publicity for the last two months of that year. But people didn't like that. The press started potshotting at me, and some of them haven't let up since."

His big mistake, he concluded, was allowing those 183 layouts to be made in the first place.

Concerning his acting career, he said that he erred in signing with 20th Century-Fox.

"I had a good role in 'Fighting Man of the Plains,'" he explained. "The studios, started courting me, and my agents urged me to sign with Fox. I thought it would be better to play the independent field; I had offers for four pictures. But my agents argued that I needed a big studio behind me."

"So I signed. And I never did get a role as good as the one I had in 'Fighting Man of the Plains.'"

The Oklahoma did some films on the lot, then became the loan-out king. He figures the studio made around $800,000 profit on his services to other producers.

The low point was his loan to Howard Hughes for the gaudy,

DOROTHY DIX

You Can Overdo Hard-to-Get Act

Dear Miss Dix: Six years ago I met Don, a young man who was only 17 and enjoyed playing hard-to-get, which was, I guess, the reason I lost him.

After he began dating another girl, I realized I loved him. He married the girl, and they moved to a large city. Some time later I was visiting my brother in that city. Don heard I was there and came to see me. He related a story of marital unhappiness and misunderstandings. He told me of their plans for divorce; in other words, he just told me all his troubles.

I know now that sooner or later we'll meet again and he'll ask to renew our friendship. In the years that have elapsed I've met many attractive men, but none I liked as much as I do Don. What should I do when we meet, treat him as a good old friend or ignore him?

Answer: My goodness, didn't you run into enough trouble with this "ignoring" route? That's how you lost Don, and I'll wager many another suitor has gone the same way. When a young man with troubles seeks out an old friend expecting to find a sympathetic listener, he doesn't want to be ignored.

Proceed Carefully

Moreover, for the time I suggest that you let Don handle his personal affairs without your assistance. You aren't exactly a disinterested party, you know. He has a serious matrimonial snag to unravel and until he comes to a solution, your place is almost definitely in the background. Don't ignore him to the offensive stage, and don't overdo the "old friend" act. Since any resemblance between your feelings for Don and those of an old friend are purely coincidental, you must maintain a strictly middle-of-the-road course. If he and his wife reconcile, step out of the picture entirely. If they persist in divorce, he'll undoubtedly need a very sympathetic listener.

Dear Miss Dix: A girl friend of ours told us she is planning a secret marriage to a boy of 20 who lives in a distant city and whom she hasn't seen for two years. Since she is only 16, we are concerned over whether or not she should do this foolish thing. He sent her the money to come to him, but her parents think she's visiting a girl friend for the week. How can we stop this?

Answer: There's a time and place for everything — including interference in another's affairs. This foolish affair should be stopped even if it means telling the girl's parents. Try to make your friend see the light first; if your efforts are fruitless, tell her folks.

Dear Miss Dix: There are about 15 girls in our office. We have one complainer, a girl who has had every disease on earth and many more that exist only in her imagination. We've been regaled with stories about her backache, headache, teeth pulling, eye trouble, foot bone trouble, rash, the things she can't eat and numerous others. In a word, she's a bore. How can we stop her?

Answer: The best way to stop monologues is with a monologue of your own. Try this plan. Next Monday, each of you come in with a carefully prepared and rehearsed talk on some ailment you have just discovered. If necessary, borrow a medical journal for details. Every time your little hypochondriac starts in on her ills, one of you girls bring attention to your own ailment. Make them interesting and you'll enjoy them so much you'll probably acquire more. At least it's almost guaranteed that your complainer will be silenced.

an organization man. He didn't get to travel much himself—there was a family to be raised—but he traveled and suffered in spirit with scores of foreign correspondents.

His closest buddy was the late Jim Mills, dean of war reporters in his time, whom Gandhi once said he expected would be waiting to interview him at the gates of Heaven. They both have reached the gates, since then, but Jim hasn't found a way to get the story through.

When Johnny Crooks, this skinny reservoir of news history, went to pasture last summer there was a big gap left in the office where he had worked for so long. It was a spiritual thing.

Johnny wasn't happy either. He cherished the inscribed gold watch—it was what he wanted—and other farewell souvenir gifts for more than half a century of service. He had the pension. He also was free now every day to watch the morning workouts a race-tracks where, as a boy, he had dreamed of riding.

But he missed the daily bugle of duty, the active feeling of belonging.

After nine endless, restless weeks, Johnny heard of a part-time stenographic job in a Wall Street law firm, applied for it and got it.

He found age no handicap in adjusting to a new job. He is boyant again, happy in his new job. The name of the firm that gave him this break—Johnny says it is a match for his own name—his partner is John Crooks, Walsh, Stahl and Johnny Crooks. Johnny, chirpy as a chicken, says idleness is a curse to a lifetime working man. He advocates a new start.

"It's a mistake for an employer to look at a man's gray hair and refuse him a job," he said. "It's always worth hiring."

"It is work that keeps a man young. It is wonderful to learn new things. I've made a lot of new friends. I'm happier now than I've been in many a year."

Johnny, who has more bounce to the ounce at 65 than many a man half his age, gives this as his personal recipe for keeping pep:

"Don't dissipate. Don't overeat. Do everything in moderation. Attend church regularly."

IN CITY TRAFFIC where tensions usually mount, Chrysler's car-like flexibility brings a wonderful sense of calm. And those admiring glances confirm your judgment that this is America's biggest fun car buy.

THEY'LL THINK YOU PAID $1,000 MORE when you drive the year-ahead car!

The only cars with which you can compare a Chrysler Windsor V-8 are the other luxury cars ... because that's what the Chrysler Windsor V-8 is. But you can own this car for the cost of a medium-priced car! And at this price, it simply defies comparison. Take the way it handles in city traffic. Something quite wonderful happens. Instead of feeling tense, you're utterly relaxed — thanks to Chrysler's full-time Power Steering System and a host of other brand new Chrysler exclusives. You're handling a big, powerful car that responds like a mind reader. It does the work for you. Your Chrysler is beautifully balanced between the forward thrust of its mighty airplane-type engine and the most powerful brakes in the industry. This car flows! Yet, if you can afford any car in the medium-priced field, you can afford to step up to a Chrysler Windsor V-8. Compare its year ahead new-car features with other leading cars in its price class. We think you'll agree that it looks and acts like a car that costs $1,000 more than it does!

This program will be called the "Inspirational Hour" and will be of a variety featuring talent from all sections of the city. It will be under the direction of Rev. C. S. Stearns, Director of Youth Incorporated, an organization designed to help young people in general. Rev. Stearns comes to Hope with a rich background in the field of youth work. Door prizes and prizes of other nature are offered as an interest to young people. Several hundred tickets numbered from one up have been distributed among the youth of Hope. As you enter the door, kindly drop your ticket in a box. At the close of the broadcast the drawing will take place.

Several cases of free colts have been donated by the Coca Cola company of Hope for all young people attending the broadcast.

This Saturday night's broadcast is one of many activities planned for the youths of Hope by Youth Incorporated.

Many business places, firms, and private citizens of the Hope area have contributed funds toward purchasing equipment and for the purpose of making this city wide youth program a success. One of the projects is a new Spinnet Hammond Organ.

Heinshon and Floyd Act Like All-Americans

By ED WILKS
Of The Associated Press

Tom Heinshon and Darrell Floyd a pair of spanking new All Americans, shared the spotlight with an upset and a couple of close shaves in college basketball last night.

Heinshon did everything but put out the cat for Holy Cross, popping in 51 points and clearing 42 rebounds as the Crusaders, warming up for the NCAA tournament, routed Boston College 111-75.

Floyd, Furman's two-time All America, was only a step or two behind in point production with a total of 43 for a Southern Conference tournament record, while leading the Paladins to an 84-70 elimination of Virginia Tech.

It was the Southern's survival-of-the-fittest shindig at Richmond, Va., that unveiled the upset, with Washington and Lee's four-star general laying the wood to George Washington 69-60. George Washington had been co-favored with West Virginia in the three-day tournament which opened last night to determine the Southern champ an NCAA entry.

Davidson almost made it a complete sweep by the underdogs, giving West Virginia a tussle before bowing 59-53. The Mountaineers met Floyd and Furman tonight in the semifinals with Washington & Lee paired against Richmond, which held William and Mary to four first half field goals to win 70-62 in the first round.

The Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament at Raleigh, N. C., had its share of first-round scares too. North Carolina State, ranked No. 5 in the nation and the defending ACC champ, had to scramble after blowing a 17-point lead to edge Clemson 88-84. North Carolina, ranked eighth nationally, came out of its game with Virginia huffing and puffing with a slim 81-77 decision.

And Wake Forest, No. 20, didn't get daylight until the last minute in its 79-64 victory over South Carolina. Wake meets North Carolina tonight. The last time they met, it led to a postgame brawl that cost both $500 in ACC fines and each lost a player by suspension until March 5.

Duke, ranked No. 11 and slated to meet N. C. State in the other semifinal tonight, was the only easy winner, thumping Maryland 64-69.

Elsewhere, DePaul was too big and too potent for Manhattan in a battle of NCAA tournament entries with Ron Sobieszyk scoring 23 points in an 86-70 rout at Madison Square Garden. The Blue Demons ending the regular season 13-7, will meet Wayne Mich in the NCAA first round at Fort Wayne, Ind., March 12.

Utah wrapped up its second straight Skyline title by bopping Colorado A&M 91-60. Utah meets the winner of the regional game between Seattle and Idaho State in its first NCAA test, at Corvallis, Ore., March 16.

Saturday night the world famous Harlem Globetrotters will tangle with the Hawaiian Surf Riders in a basketball game at the Emmet gymnasium. Not only do the Globetrotters put on a comical show they are actually unsurpassed in basketball skill. Besides the game which in itself is show enough, some seven amazing acts of skill will be featured at half time. Above is Tady Song of the Hawaiian team and Henry Kean of the Globetrotters.

Heinshon and Floyd Act Like All-Americans

By ED WILKS
Of The Associated Press

Tom Heinshon and Darrell Floyd a pair of spanking new All Americans, shared the spotlight with an upset and a couple of close shaves in college basketball last night.

Heinshon did everything but put out the cat for Holy Cross, popping in 51 points and clearing 42 rebounds as the Crusaders, warming up for the NCAA tournament, routed Boston College 111-75.

Floyd, Furman's two-time All America, was only a step or two behind in point production with a total of 43 for a Southern Conference tournament record, while leading the Paladins to an 84-70 elimination of Virginia Tech.

It was the Southern's survival-of-the-fittest shindig at Richmond, Va., that unveiled the upset, with Washington and Lee's four-star general laying the wood to George Washington 69-60. George Washington had been co-favored with West Virginia in the three-day tournament which opened last night to determine the Southern champ an NCAA entry.

Davidson almost made it a complete sweep by the underdogs, giving West Virginia a tussle before bowing 59-53. The Mountaineers met Floyd and Furman tonight in the semifinals with Washington & Lee paired against Richmond, which held William and Mary to four first half field goals to win 70-62 in the first round.

The Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament at Raleigh, N. C., had its share of first-round scares too. North Carolina State, ranked No. 5 in the nation and the defending ACC champ, had to scramble after blowing a 17-point lead to edge Clemson 88-84. North Carolina, ranked eighth nationally, came out of its game with Virginia huffing and puffing with a slim 81-77 decision.

And Wake Forest, No. 20, didn't get daylight until the last minute in its 79-64 victory over South Carolina. Wake meets North Carolina tonight. The last time they met, it led to a postgame brawl that cost both $500 in ACC fines and each lost a player by suspension until March 5.

Duke, ranked No. 11 and slated to meet N. C. State in the other semifinal tonight, was the only easy winner, thumping Maryland 64-69.

Elsewhere, DePaul was too big and too potent for Manhattan in a battle of NCAA tournament entries with Ron Sobieszyk scoring 23 points in an 86-70 rout at Madison Square Garden. The Blue Demons ending the regular season 13-7, will meet Wayne Mich in the NCAA first round at Fort Wayne, Ind., March 12.

Burke Takes Slim Lead at Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Jackie Burke Jr. of Kiamasha Lake, N.Y. today took a one-stroke lead and on an aching back into the second round of the $12,500 Baton Rouge Open Golf Tournament.

Burke fired a record-qualifying 7-under-par 32-35-65 in the opening round yesterday over the 6,450-yard Baton Rouge Country Club course. He shares the tourney record with three others.

Burke missed a 15-inch putt on the 18th hole that would have given him a 64, tying the course mark.

Close behind with a steady 33-36-66 was Ed Furgol of St. Louis. Bunched at 67 were amateur Rod Punsteh, Spokane, Wash.; George Bayer, Cincinnati; Shelley Mayfield, Westbury, N.Y.; and Harry Dee, Harsdale, N.Y.

After shooting his sizzling round, Burke went to Louisiana State University where athletic trainer Marty Broussard treated a pleurisy condition with diathermy and infrared rays.

"It began to bother me on the fifth hole," Burke said. "It hurts when I breathe, but not when I swing my club. The trainer wants me to come back tomorrow for more treatments, but I don't want to go before I play."

Sunday will be a memorable day in the First Baptist Church, of Hope. At the eleven o'clock hour a note burning service will be conducted commemorating the liquidation of the indebtedness against the new sanctuary. Five years and two months ago the congregation entered the new edifice. The church planned to take seven and one-half years to pay off the debt. With the balance being paid off last week they are two and one-half years of schedule.

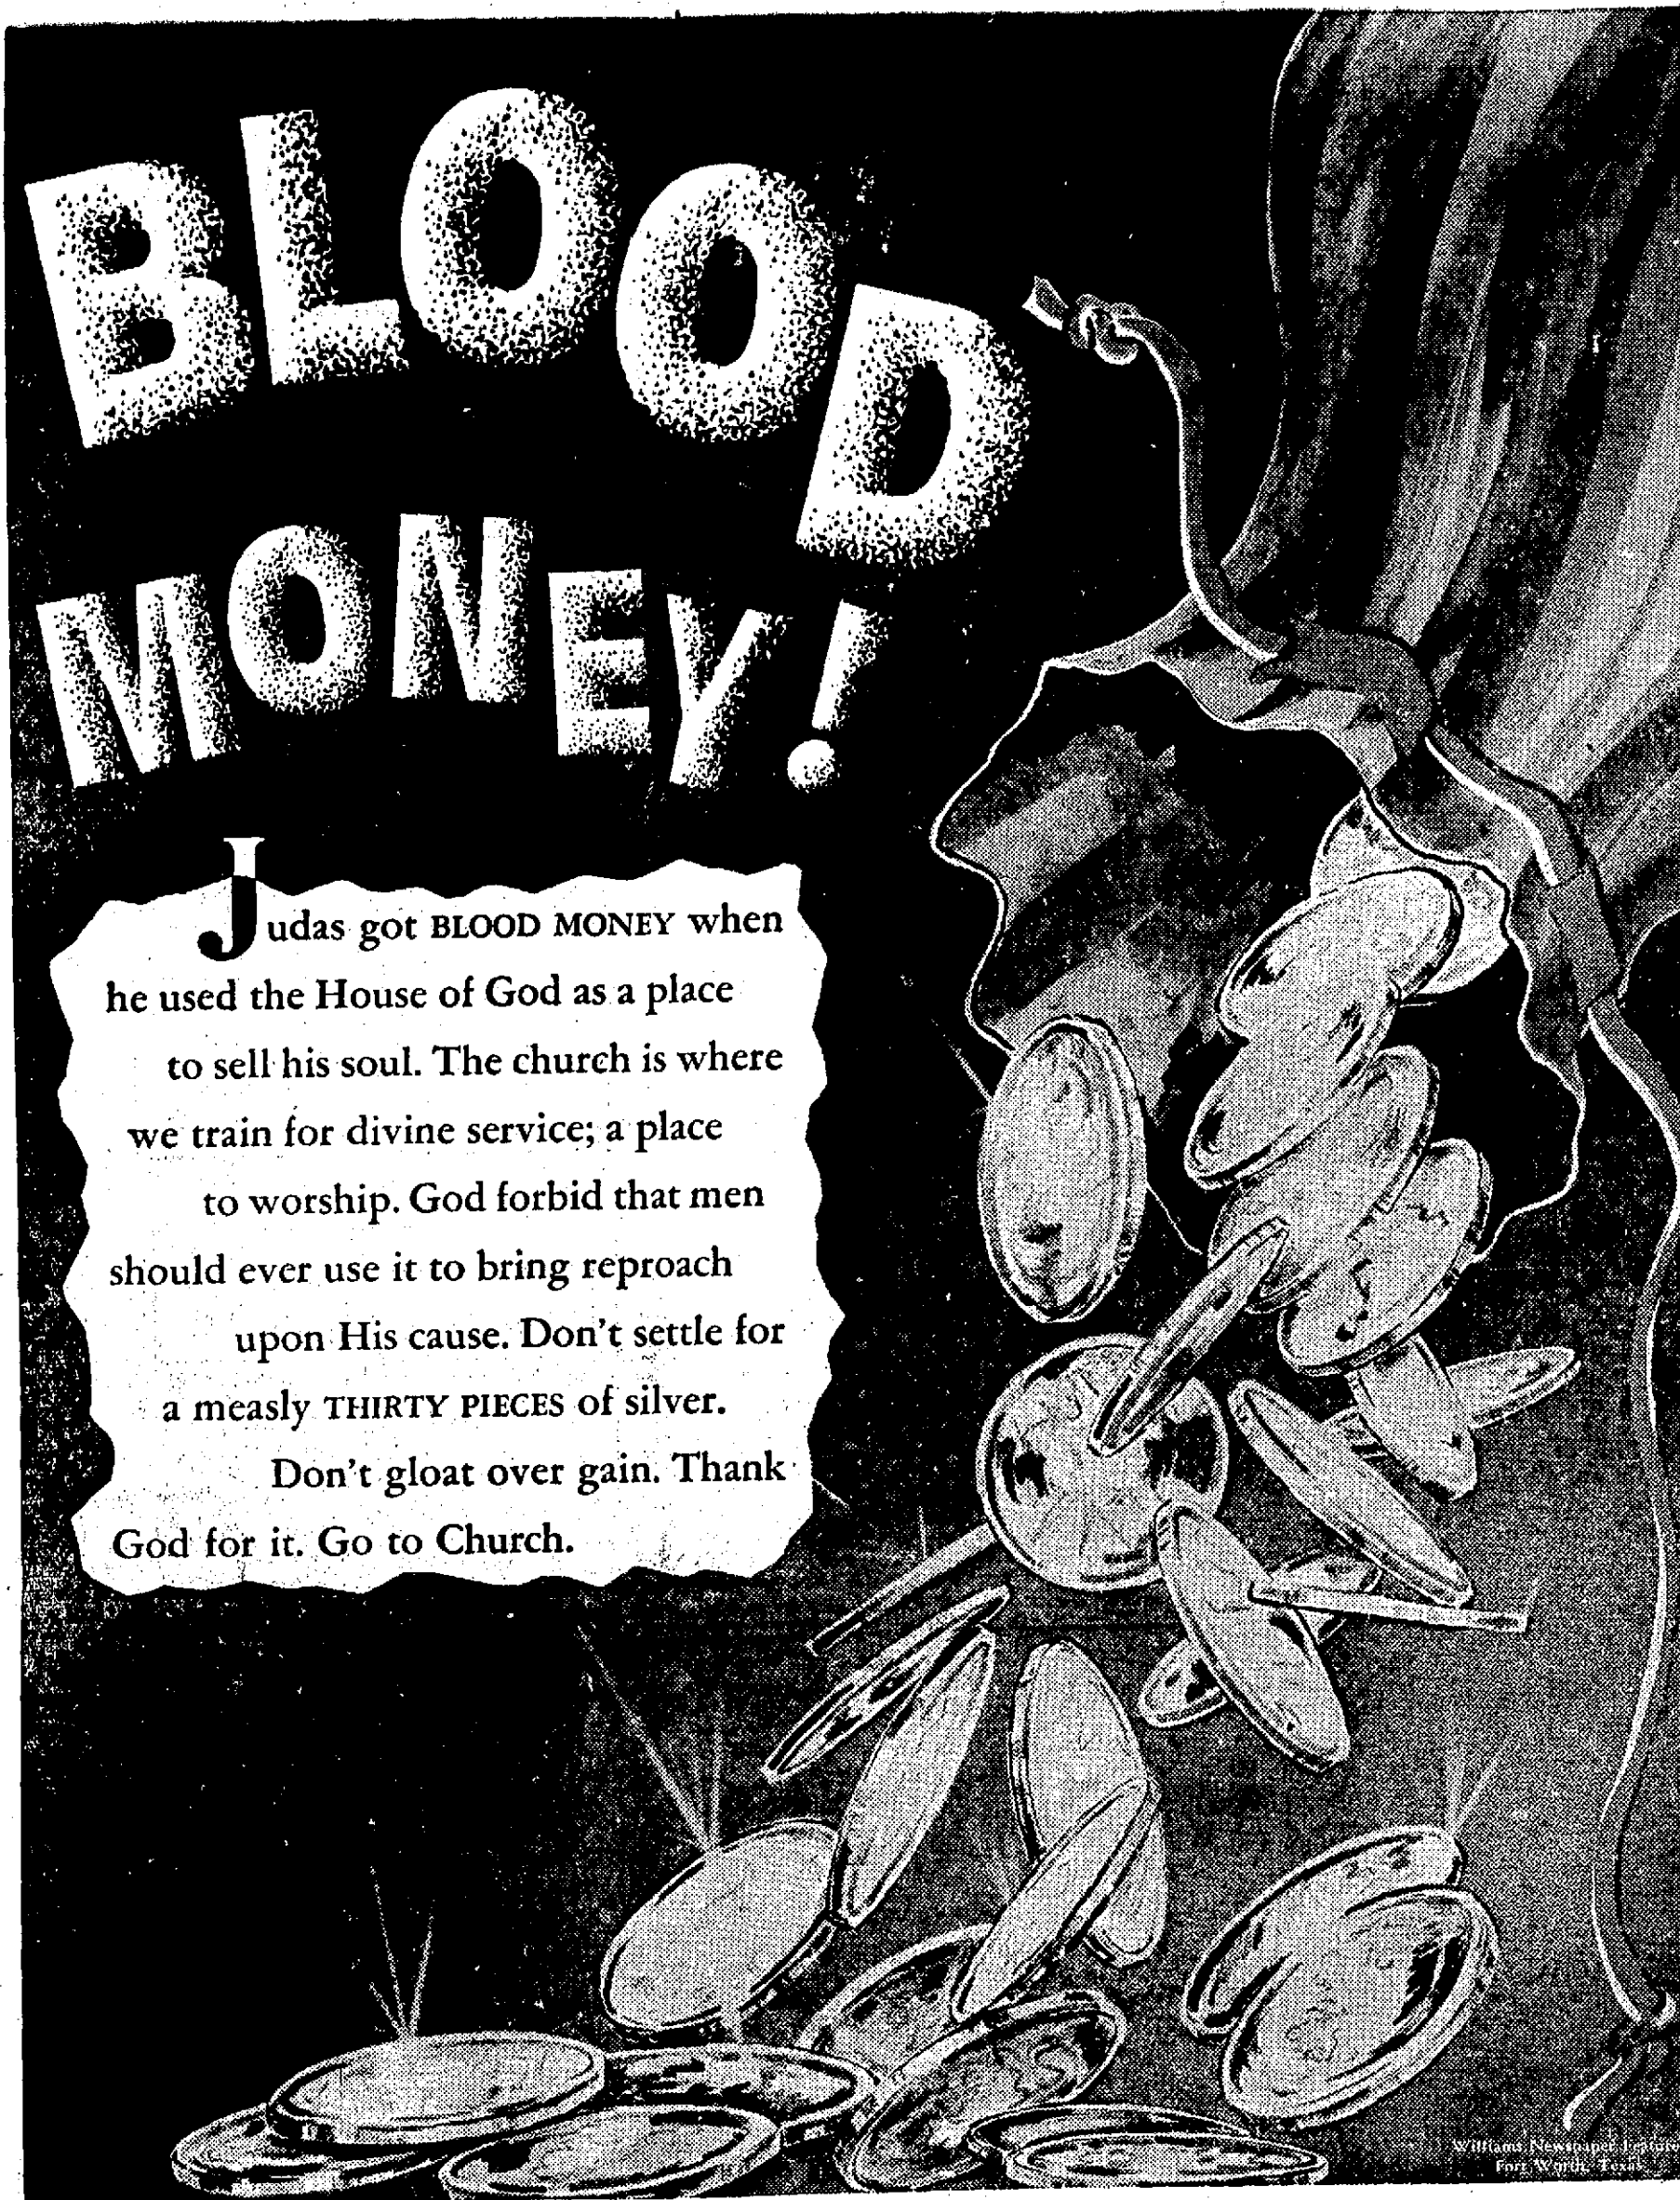

The total cost of the building and equipment amounted to approximately $225,000. Plans are being made to erect an educational building on the corner of Third

under the leadership of any church.

In both concept and execution the series of 13 films entitled "The Way" represents a significant step in organized religion's growing consciousness of the TV medium. The series shuns preaching, is nondenominational in its appeal, and is solely concerned with dramatizing various aspects of Christian principles of living.

The series is offered free to any TV station anywhere with only these provisions: They will be shown in specified sequence at any desired regular weekly time except an hour that might interfere with church attendance. There a strong practical idealism.

Judas got BLOOD MONEY when he used the House of God as a place to sell his soul. The church is where we train for divine service; a place to worship. God forbid that men should ever use it to bring reproach upon His cause. Don't settle for a measly THIRTY PIECES of silver. Don't gloat over gain. Thank God for it. Go to Church.

shall be no commercial in connection with them — not even a "Go to church."

The first drama, "An Eye for an Eye," was shown here last Saturday afternoon on the ABC network's local station. Distinguished by superior acting, it told this story:

A gang of boys wreck a church recreation room. The minister, a calm, strong man, loses an eye when the boys gang up on him as he tries to restore order. The police regard the boys as "wild animals" who cannot be tamed, to fail to prosecute them, the police maintain, is to turn their viciousness loose on society. But the minister opposes prosecution. At this request the boys are released in probation in his custody. The failures and the success are delineated in down-to-earth fashion.

A viewer is left with the conviction that the answer to delinquency is no simple matter. One sees the power of the gang over its members. But the strong influence of people who care is shown in a most convincing manner.

It's not a subtle story. But it gives a feeling of reality—in sharp contrast to many TV "religious" dramas which leave one with a reaction of unreality and sentimentality. In on formal sense is it preaching. But it is the best kind of preaching in the sense that what one is and does speaks more clearly than any words. Through the excellent characterizations of the minister and his wife there flows with church attendance. There a strong practical idealism.
